Nurses' Campaign to Win Medicare for All Frequently Asked Questions:

“Medicare for All is too big a change. How will you ever pass it?”

---

Great change always requires great struggle. It is true that Medicare for All will be a great challenge to get passed. So was virtually every major change in this country's history. The movement to pass Medicare for All is our best hope of overcoming the opposition of the insurance and drug companies and truly transforming our profit-driven health care system.

- No matter what form of health reform we pursue, we are up against the same powerful interests, making an all-in effort to pass Medicare for All the right choice. The Partnership for America's Healthcare Future, a group of insurance and drug companies established to fight health care expansion, states on its own website that any major overhaul of our failed health care system is unacceptable, no matter what form it takes. There's no reason to settle for less than a much-needed overhaul of our system since anything we do will face the same opposition.
- No great change has ever occurred in this country without a mass movement driving it. The Civil Rights Act, Social Security, and Medicare were all transformational changes in this country's history that would not have occurred without a broad-based grassroots movement. A national movement will be required to pass any substantial change to our country's health care system. The movement to pass Medicare for All already exists. And it is growing stronger every day!
- Medicare for All has the energy, the enthusiasm, and the public support needed to overcome big money opposition. 70 percent of Americans support Medicare for All, and the plan has continued to dominate any discussion of health care reform. No other plan to reform our healthcare system has anywhere near the level of activist buy-in as Medicare for All. A majority of the House Democratic Caucus supports HR 1384, including the Caucus Chair Hakeem Jeffries and Assistant Speaker Ben Ray Lujan. Medicare for All has the energy, momentum, and organization needed to overcome the opposition and transform our health care system.
